OVERVIEW

Kelly primarily handles commercial litigation matters and business disputes. Aided by her master's-level training in journalism, she is adept at quickly grasping complex technical concepts and distilling the information into clear, accessible legal arguments.

Previously, Kelly served as a summer associate at SHJ. She also held summer positions with two New Orleans-based litigation boutique firms. Prior to law school, Kelly worked as a reporter at Global Investigations Review, where she covered government agency and internal corporate investigations of issues relating to international anti-bribery and corruption, financial services misconduct, fraud, and money laundering.
